

New Jersey Audubon's World Series of Birding 24 hours of Birding for Conservation

After a successful carbon-neutral effort in 2020, The Wetlands Institute's intrepid birding team, The Marshketeers, is treading lightly once again for the 2021 New Jersey Audubon World Series of Birding. On Saturday May 8, we'll be heading out on foot, bike, kayak - maybe even horseback - to identify as many bird species as we can.

The World Series of Birding is one of the most popular birding events in the country, and we have an amazing team assembled from our very own staff. Now we need you! By pledging to The Marshketeers today, you can support our efforts and help make a difference for birds. Your donation goes directly to supporting critical coastal bird research and conservation work right here at the Institute.

Using strictly carbon-neutral means of travel, The Marshketeers identified 132 species last year and raised more than $5,500 for bird conservation. This year we're setting our sights higher, giving you a greater opportunity to do good. And don't forget to include your additional pledge if our team spots the stunning Blue Grosbeak, this year's "Bonus Bird".

Ways to show your support

- Pledge an amount per bird species identified, and mail your contribution after results are in.
- Contribute a fixed amount to send in right away.
- Offer an additional pledge based on whether we spot this year's "Bonus Bird," the Blue Grosbeak.
